The news update published in Zoo's Print 38(9): 9-11 "Memoirs of a Pahadi Adventure" <<https://zoosprint.org/index.php/zp/article/view/7646/6901>> had the following issues:

- i) p. 10. A picture of Fagopyrum esculentum was given with a caption that read "Phaphru (Fagopyrum esculentum), a local delicacy which I no longer have the heart to taste after learning that the plant's invasive. © Aishwarya S Kumar." It should be noted that this plant species was wrongly mentioned as invasive in the article. It is in fact introduced.
- ii) p. 11. The sentence "For instance, Fagopyrum esculentum (or 'Phaphru', as it's called in Chambyali, the local dialect) holds cultural significance and is used to make a local delicacy." Does not hold true the context. The plant is an introduced species to the region, not invasive.
